

Roleplaying: Make up a Game

As we learned in camp, children who lived during the Victorian Era loved nature. Your character would have definitely spent a lot of time in the garden, playing as much as they could with whatever they could find! Today, for roleplaying, you are being challenged to create a game outside (or inside if it's raining) using whatever objects you have around you!

Need a little inspiration before getting outside and using your imagination? Use the ideas below to help get you started!

- Do you like running? Think about making a running course or maybe an obstacle course!
- Do you like playing board games? Whether you are inside or outside, can you think of a game to recreate? Or maybe you can make up your own using your imagination!
- Do you like hockey? Or golf? Find objects like a ball and stick to hit objects on the ground. Maybe you could hit them at or through targets!
- Do you like horseshoes or bean bag toss games? Find objects and targets you can throw them at. If you have someone to play with, make it a challenge!
- Do you like tennis or ping pong? Find something that could be a ball and racket. If you can find someone to play with you, try to volley it back and forth!
- Do you like building things? Maybe try making houses using natural materials! If you're inside, maybe you could use bigger objects to make a fort!
